

A Little Piece of Heaven...

Looking for the perfect gift for the spouse who has everything? How about a star?

Are you wondering what the going price is for a little piece of heaven? You can present one of these priceless treasures without spending a dime. While you might be able to buy an acre of land on the moon for $30.00 or an acre of the rainforest for about the same, buying a star from your mate doesn't cost anything more than a little imagination.

Which star has your spouse's name written all over it? Arcturus? Sirius? Castor? Pollux? Maybe even a planet like Venus or Mars? Whichever one you chose it will no longer just be a star it will be your star. Chosen by you, given to him.

Once you've decided which of the celestial jewels you want to present to your mate, take a little time to make it look official. Hop on the computer and create a certificate of ownership that you can offer him at the unveiling. Print it out on a thick sheet of paper and tuck it into an elegant envelope. Write his name across the front in script or calligraphy and get ready to make him smile.

That night, after the sun has gone down and the stars are twinkling overhead, take him outside. Stand together looking at the heavens (this would be a great thing to do while you're on an evening stroll at the park.) When the moment is right and you know he is lost in the majesty of universe, it's time to surprise him with your gift. Take him by the hand and point to the heavens. Help him locate it and then let him know that from now on, that's not just any star, it's his. Present him with his certificate of ownership and watch him smile.

When you first started dating, you had "your song" and "your restaurant"...

Now, you can have your own little piece of heaven!
